If You're Qualified, Help Protect Our Resources

DOCARE has primary responsibility for resource enforcement in the State. Hawai'i has the fourth largest coastline in the nation. There are 23,000 acres of inland surface water, 3 million acres of state ocean waters, 410,000 acres of coral reef around the main Hawai'ian Islands. We have the largest tropical rainforest in the United States and the eleventh largest state forest of which over one million acres are utilized for hunting. In addition, there are 2 million acres of conservation land and 1.2 million acres of state owned lands. DOCARE officers throughout the State work to contact, inform, educate, and provide enforcement to the 1.2 million residents and 6 million visitors that utilize the State's resources on a regular basis.
